

OFFICIAL NEWSLETTER OF THE IDAHO MILITARY VEHICLE PRESERVATION ASSOCIATION

April 2017

The President's Corner

The annual military show is coming up fast. I'm asking our members to come, support, and display their equipment for the weekend. I'd love to see some living history, tents, and sandbags. This could be our best show yet! Yes its different, yes it's in town, and yes it's free!

The only event of the year that I ask members to give their FULL support to is OUR annual military show. It's an IMVPA official event. The very future of this event depends on this year's participation and success. Future events are not at all guaranteed.

At this year's event there will be a car wash, a free pancake breakfast, and a beer garden. Already we are getting requests from vendors and organizations who desire to come out and set up tents and booths. The excitement is building.

Thanks to Benjamin our facebook page has been revitalized and that will help get the word out. He has uploaded the newest flyer there which can be shared with families and friends. Our flyer is also on the website. At the last meeting we asked every member to share 10 flyers with others. You can post them around town, email to friends, share on social media, or hand them out at work. We have already arranged for the event to run in the MVPA magazine.

About the MVPA. Are you a member, and if not, why not? Only about 1/3 of our members are, and that concerns me. This international organization fights for our hobby, publishes informative magazines, maintains informative web pages, and has conventions all over. They also do much more. I strongly recommend them so check them out today.

Finally, I would love to see members contribute to the newsletter. What are your stories? What are your adventures? You don't have to major in English literature to write an article. We are neither graded nor critiqued. Let's hear about what interests you!

Your Military Vehicle is Done; now what?

By Ron P

You are dedicated to preserving military history, and the proof is that amazing military vehicle you have! I bet you can easily recall the day when your vehicle was done, it looked amazing, and performed flawlessly. Whether you bought it or built it, there was still the long search, the research, and tying up all the loose ends. No doubt it included a real investment in time and money. I often wonder what motivates people to be so dedicated in this hobby?

For many it's the journey that is the thrill. That may include the search, the ultimate deal, finding parts, and turning wrenches. For others it's the destination that counts; the thrill of the drive or rolling through the parade. Whether you bought it or built it, or somewhere in between, eventually you may come to the point of "now what"?

For some, one is enough! Others answer the question by getting another one of course, until your garage is a small motor pool. I've seen folks in the hobby build bigger and bigger each time, until they have a tank or even an airplane. It's quite an addiction, isn't it?!

Others load up their vehicle(s) with military gear, such as helmets, weapons, and packs. I like to think of this as living history, where the display is part of the experience, and it may even include a tent, cot and sandbags. Of course there are some vehicles so loaded down "with combat load" that one can barely see what's underneath!

Then there are the re-enactors. I admire their dedication, as I dare say they are the most committed of all. You can bet their uniform and "kit" is flawlessly historically correct. Reenacting is popular in the US, be it revolutionary war, civil war, or WW2. Personally I think it would be a lot of fun, but wonder if active battles aren't for the "much" younger crowd.

Getting back to living history now. I think this is one of the best ways to enjoy our hobby. I admire Don and Karen Wadley, who among others, are absolutely dedicated to educating the public about our military history. This is the premise of the IMVPA after all. I love it when they dress the part and "live" in the time period they portray. And do you recall our brothers and sisters in Battle Group Idaho? When they set up their displays, you can bet they know every detail about every weapon, every button, and every stitch on their uniform.

As a prior military history teacher myself, I completely understand, support and admire those of you who strive to go the extra mile and expand our hobby in these ways. And let's be honest, it's fun isn't it!! So yes you have a lot of options, once your MV is done. Don't get discouraged or bored with the hobby. There is so much more to do.

Above left: the Carrol brothers own this beautiful halftrack named "old expendable". They also own a M38 that needs restoration and a M1008 CUCV they are doing engine work to. Our newest member, General Walt showed us these two restored beauties; a MB and GMC 1.5 ton. Some of our members have only one vehicle, others have several. How many do you have? Let us know!
